

A Day in Quarantine

A day in quarantine,
With the echo of the busy birds chirping in the distance,
And the cars racing by,
Leaving no traces.

A day in quarantine,
Drags on and on,
The sun welcomes me,
As I start my daily run.

A day in quarantine,
I see the once active streets no longer,
Silence covers the street,
The closed businesses sit.

A day in quarantine,
A constant reminder,
That now more than ever,
We all play a role.
